easily done by using a quart flour sifter with a crank, but the sifter is difficult to clean. Measure, cook again until mixture clings together and follows spoon, being careful not to allow to burn. Add equal parts sugar and continue the cooking to evaporate as much water as possible without burning. In the beginning cook rapidly; toward the end, cook slowly, in a double boiler, watching carefully and stirring constantly. When all mixture again clings together and mixture again clings together and follows spoon in stirring, remove from fire and spread about 1 inch thick on a marble slab or paraffin paper. Dry in the sun for two into the house at night. Drying may be done in an oven at a low temperature, but preferably in the sun. Wrap in oiled paper and put in a box lined with paraffin paper.

Noel A. Mitchell of St. Petersburg, independent candidate for governor, spoke here in front of the Seminole Hotel last Friday night. He had an audience of a hundred who gave his speech careful attention. He was, however, subjected to several interruptions, which he took good naturedly. These interruptions were made by a very few who did not appreciate the courtesy that is always due to a respectable visitor.

Mr. Mitchell's speech, which was something over an hour in length, was very interesting; in fact, it was logical and forceful, and he claims that, as a result of it several men promised to vote in the seminor of the days. Strain again and bottle.
